Epilog: Epilog

The question, the white men were asking, was:

"It is free to you, to stay here, easterly from the Mississippi river, even it is not sure, whether this land will still be yours tomorrow, or whether you even will be able to survive here then, when other white men will come and take this land and every treasure which it contains with them. But you can also join us on our way to our home, leave your land and your culture, or even your relatives behind you and try to start a new, totally different life.

So... Who wants to come with us?"

What would you do?
